

JOHN MACCAULEY III PARTNER AT HIDDEN VALLEY HOMES URBAN

"If your mind can conceive it and your heart can believe it, then you can achieve it." – Muhammed Ali

None of John's lifelong friends would be surprised that he's a partner in Hidden Valley Home's urban venture, HV Urban, as he's been obsessed with home design and construction since high school. degree in Electrical Engineering, John began a managerial career at General Electric. But the lure of the custom home building industry continued to entice John, so after graduating with his MBA from The University of Notre Dame, John followed his heart and took a job in the custom home building business. Still, he's grateful for the training he gained at GE as he strongly believes (and clients agree!) that his diverse experience give him an edge in this busy and bustling industry.

HV Urban focuses on urban development in Nashville. Most recently, John and partner, Jim Spangler purchased over one and a half acres in East Nashville and plan to develop a mixed-density residential development that could include as many as 62 townhomes, carriage homes and stacked flats. As a world traveler, John knows the excitement and energy that comes from living in a vibrant and growing metropolitan area and is thrilled to be able to help clients find their perfect home in the heart of Music City. Located just eight minutes from downtown Nashville, this new development will offer high end amenities and a range of price points for savvy homeowners.

John is very happily married with two sons who have inherited their dad's passion for all things sports related. When not traveling the globe, John and his family can be found watching college football, cheering on their favorite baseball teams or scouting local sporting events.
